

Review Men's 69kg

- Won Jeongsik (KOR) became the first athlete from Korea to win a world title in the men's 69kg event.
- Prior to these world championships, Korea had won eight medals in this class but none were gold.
- Won was the first athlete to win the world title in both the Snatch and Total men's 69kg event since Liao Hui (CHN) in 2014.
- Doston Yoqubov (UZB) won the world title in the Clean & Jerk event, becoming the first athlete representing Uzbekistan to win a world title in another category than the men's 105kg.
- Yoqubov's previous best result was a seventh place in the Clean & Jerk event at the 2014 world championships.
- Korea and Uzbekistan became the sixth and seventh country to win a world title in a men's 69kg event.
- Bernardin Kingue Matam (FRA) claimed the bronze medal in the Total and the Clean & Jerk category - he was the second French athlete to win a medal in a men's 69kg event, after Vencelas Dabaya (FRA, G2-S1-B4).
- Tairat Bunsuk (THA, second in Total and Snatch) was the first athlete representing Thailand to win a medal in a men's 69kg event.
- Mirko Zanni (ITA) finished third in the Snatch event, becoming the first Italian athlete to win a medal in a men's event at the world championships since 1985. Then, Norberto Oberburger (ITA) won three medals in men's 110kg events.
