

Review Women's 75kg

- Lidia Valentin Perez (ESP) won the world title in the Snatch, Clean & Jerk and Total and became the first ever person from Spain to win a world title in weightlifting.
- Valentin Perez had already claimed one silver and three bronze medals, which means she has now won seven medals combined, all in the 75kg event.
- Valentin Perez is 32 years old and became the oldest world champion in a women's event since the introduction of the current weight classes in 1998.
- Neisi Patricia Dajomes Barrera (ECU) claimed silver in the Snatch and Total and bronze in the Clean & Jerk.
- Dajomes Barrera became the second woman from Ecuador to win world championships medals, following Alexandra Escobar (ECU) who won eight medals between 2001 and 2013.
- Ankhtsetseg Munkhjantsan (MGL) took the bronze medal in the Snatch, becoming Mongolia's first medal winner, male or female, at the world championships.
- Gaelle Verlaine Nayo Ketchanke (FRA) claimed the silver in the Clean & Jerk and bronze in the Total, becoming the first athlete from France to reach the podium in a women's event since 1996, when Sylvie Iskin (FRA) took Snatch bronze in the +83kg and Benedicte Comblez (FRA) finished in third place in the Snatch in the 64kg.
